Honorifics Explained

Throughout the Del Rey Manga books, you will find Japanese honorifics (translations) of the translators. For many translations, we have the Japanese with honorifics, and those designated as "they" differ from the actual characters. We present this brief overview.

Politeness has always been a crucial ikada (徳) Japanese culture. Ever since the feudal era, when Japan was a highly stratified society, use of honorifics—which can be defined as polite speech that indicates relationship or status—has played an essential role in the Japanese language. When addressing someone in Japanese, an honorific usually takes the form of a suffix attached to one's name (example: "Asuna-san") or used as a title at the end of one's name, or appears in place of the name itself (example: "Negi-sensei" or simply "Sensei").

Honorifics can be expressions of respect or endearment. In the context of manga and anime, honorifics give insight into the nature of the relationship between characters. Many English translations leave out these important honorifics and therefore distort the feel of the original Japanese. Because Japanese honorifics contain nuances that English honorifics lack, it is our policy at Del Rey not to translate them. Here, instead, is a guide to some of the honorifics you may encounter in Del Rey Manga.

-san: This is the most common honorific and is equivalent to Mr., Miss, Ms., or Mrs. It is the all-purpose honorific and can be used in any situation where politeness is required.

-sama: This is one level higher than -san and is used to confer great respect.

-dono: This comes from the word "dono," which means "lord." It is an even higher level than -sama and confers utmost respect.

chan: This suffix is used at the end of boys' names to express familiarity or endearment. It is also sometimes used by men among friends or when addressing someone younger or of a lower station.

san: This is used to express endearment, mostly toward girls. It is also used for little boys, pets, and even among lovers. It gives a sense of childish cuteness.

kun: This is an informal way to refer to a boy, similar to the English terms "kid" and "squirt."

senpai/senpai: This title suggests that the addressee is one's senior in a group or organization. It is most often used in a school setting, where underclassmen refer to their upperclassmen as "senpai." It can also be used in the workplace, such as when a newer employee addresses an employee who has seniority in the company.

sehai: This is the opposite of "senpai" and is used toward underclassmen in school or newcomer, in the work place. It connotes that the addressee is of a lower station.

sensei: Literally meaning "one who has come before," this title is used for teachers, doctors, or masters of any profession or art.

blank: This is usually forgotten in these lists, but it is perhaps the most significant difference between Japanese and English. The lack of honorific means that the speaker has permission to address the person in a very intimate way (usually, only family, spouses, or very close friends have this kind of permission). Known as yobisute, it can be gratifying when someone you have earned the intimate starts to call you by name without an honorific. But if it is not earned, it can be very

This is a somewhat double page of Caro and Nina, which was very popular. Some of them of it. I don't think I've done many illustrations of them before. I drew my own magic for Nina, though the artwork is a bit difficult of controlling it, "ugh!" the team is saying. It was great to receive many good responses on this episode.

Pop29: A Confession in the Woods

This square page is my personal favorite. It was fun drawing it a little differently from the other illustrations since it is the year of the Goatskin. Let's wait a second for a hint. This hard to tell out, but it is truly.

There God I was able to bring out Clower. I had a lot of fun with the goatskin drawing. I was drawn in a magic world. I want to go to a better world. I am afraid of being chased by the monkeys. I hope.

Bye-Bye

This is the last page. Thank you for reading all the way to the end. It's already six volumes long. Perhaps this is considered long for shōjo manga. Although I've experienced much hardship, I've also had so much joy. After I finish writing this, I'll be working on the final chapter. I feel deep emotions about this entire journey to the end, but I'm excited to know the conclusion is near... So I'll be my pleasure if you enjoy it all the way to the last page. The upcoming volume 7 will be the final volume. I hope you'll support me to the very end.
